A CHURCH MASQUERADE PARTY. One of the strictest pastors in Bridgeport, Conn., is Rev. H. W. Wilson, of the Stratfield Baptist Church. He neither plays cards nor dances, and he thinks persons who do either ought to p ay that they may be made purer and diverted from their wickedness. Yet the story is in circulation that he got up a masquerade ball for the benefit of his church, at which leading pew owners and trustees app ared as ballet girls and red Indians, and at which Mr. Wilson himself masqueraded as a giant.

The story is causing a good deal of discussion in the church, and residents who only hear imperfect versions of what happened have the impression that the Stratfield Church Baptists have been captured and taken into camp by the devil. This does not seem to be so, and it is only just that the truth should be told.

Certain young members of the church, who have been to New York and seen things, thought they would like to get up a masquerade. They were bold enough to want to have it under the auspices of their church. A body of youths, who have since been referred to as the "jollving committee," waited upon Mr. Wilson and unfolded their plan. He was very much shocked. "But,"said they, "the affair will be perfectly decorous, and even edifying, for we intend to represent, for the most part, the godly men in the Bible. It will bring religion right home by showing the members how people looked and dress in those days."

This had some weight. "What do you call this entertainment?" asked

"It's called a 'character party,' " said the young men. "You must have heard the young men "You must have heard of them. They have them in most of the churches. They are particularly useful in instructing the young."

And the end of it was that the "jollyingl committee" won the day. The pastor gave his consent, and told the young people to go ahead and organize their "character play" on the Biblical lines described in their prospectus.

He even consented to appear himself in costume. Mr. Wilson weighs 110

In the sewing circles and at after noon teas the affair was talked over very solemuly by the older folks, but with a mysterious snicker by younger members. A barrel of wigs, tights and grotesque masks was sent up from a New York costumer's and rehearsals were held in remote corners of houses. Rumors were industriously circulated that the affair was not to have any more latitude than a church fair with a "Rebecca at the Well" annex, and Mr. Wilson prepared to spend a delightful evening with old Biblical ladies and gentlemen decorously resuscitated for the occasion. The night of the "character party" cane. The old folks got to the hall early with their knitting and sat around it with a pleased look of expectancy. Then the "Biblical character". ters" began to file in before their as-tonished eyes. There were ballet girls, red Indians, clowns, living pictures, harlequins and tramps, with alcoholic make-ups, pretending to be drunk. It was said by some of the outraged trustees that the affair par-took very much of the character of the French ball in New York, though how a Bridgeport church elder know about French balls is not quite clear. knows "Thank heaven, the pastor doesn't know about this!" said an old lady fervently. "It would break his heart."

"Know about it!" exclaimed one of the committee. "Why, he got the thing up. He's coming himself dressed as the Wild Man of Borneo, in a few minutes."

"Impossible."
At this moment Mr. Wilson, who, it is said, was in his costume, put his head in the door. He was splendidly gotten up, they declare, as Goliath, and the expression that came over his face as he saw the wild, weird scene of rev-elry before him was a perfect imitation of the physiognomy or the giant when he realized that David had got the de-cision. Mr. Wilson himself says that he did not don his costume at all.

"There he is!" cried the young folks.
"There's the pastor as the Wild Man of Borneo. But Mr. Wilson gave one startled cry and fled out into the night. The masqueraders resolved that they might as well be electrocuted for a sheep as a lamb, and they continued the dance, a few of the older persons

As Mr. Wilson had given the "character party" his sanction, he is in a predicament. Those who were scandalized by the ball don't know what to do or say, and all the others are laughing.
